

About Me

Roseline Mkoba Anthony is a data Conversation Staff at IGN-FI Tanzania. She has a great passion of training people who are digital literacy thus she has an experience of being an IT trainer for about a year. She holds a bachelor degree in Computer science from the University of Dar es Salaam, graduated in 2017. Her hands grabbed the first entrepreneurial project in 2017/2018 it was a college project where she was implementing an automated greenhouse horticulture which operates by means of sensors when there is shortage of water the system would water the plants without requiring her presence. Following the mistreatment reports of housekeepers surfacing day by day and the difficult of obtaining skilled individuals all over Tanzania she is now dedicated to establish a training center that will be connecting people to skilled individuals (housekeepers). This is her second entrepreneurial activity she has a strong will to continue growing and impacting lives of the needy.
